U.S. Reform Jews Seek Huge Sum For Art Center In N.Y.

Leaders of American Reform Judaism started a $two million campaign for the establishment of a "religious art center" in New York City that will be used for the creation of various artistic projects dealing with Jewish religious and cultural themes, says the New York Times. One of the major aims of the center, it was stated, will be to encourage 664 Reform Jewish congregations throughout the country to utilize newly created works, including music and drama, "to deepen and enrich religious worship and experience."

The congregations, whose members total more than one million, are affiliated with the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, which held its 48th general assembly in San Francisco, Calif.

Irvin Fane, chairman of the board of trustees of the Union, said that negotiations were under way for the purchase of a building or a site for the proposed center.

He said the center will be "the artistic equivalent" of the union's Religious Action Center in Washington, D.C., which deals with the organization's social action programs.

Mr. Fane said the religious center would be equipped for the presentation of plays, operas, and the dance. It will include a library containing books, scores, prints, catalogues, films, recordings and other cultural resources that will be placed at the disposal of artists and scholars.

In addition, Mr. Fane said classes would be held for artists to enable them to acquire the background they need to create new works on Jewish themes.

He said that his organization hopes to make available scholarships for the encouragement of new talent and the commissioning of

Scores German Plan To Cut Payments To Nazi Victims

A spokesman for victims of Nazi persecution charged in Bonn, West Germany, that a proposed reduction in West Germany's compensation payments would "shake all confidence" in Bonn's actions.

Kurt Grossman, of New York, special representative of the Conference on Material Claims Against Germany, said in an interview with the New York Times writer, Thomas J. Hamilton, that West Germany's proposal to reduce compensation payments next year would be "a flagrant breach of a solemn promise" made by Chancellor Ludwig Erhard's Government when the "Final Indemnification Law" was adopted last May.

He added that if the Bundestag — the Lower House of Parliament — accepted the Chancellor's budget recommendation and reduced compensation payments to 1.9 billion marks ($476 million) for each of the years 1966 and 1967, the Conference might appeal to the Federal Constitutional Court in Karlsruhe.

According to Mr. Grossman, the Final Indemnification Law requires compensation of 2.2 billion to 2.3 billion marks ($550 million to $575 million) for 1966 and the same sum for 1967.

This, he said, would involve a total reduction for the two years of up to 800 million marks ($200 million) during a period when the settlement of additional claims would actually require larger appropriations.

The proposed reduction in payments was recommended by Dr. Erhard as part of an economy program intended to reduce the expected $1.75 billion federal deficit next year to manageable dimensions.

The program, which includes reductions in old-age pensions, higher

Officials Says Israel Needs $1.2 Billion In Next Ten Years

Nahum Shamir, Israel's Economic Minister, declared that a capital investment of $1.2 billion was needed in the next ten years if his nation was to achieve a self-sustained economy. The Israeli official told the closing session of the 42nd annual convention of the National Committee for Labor Israel, at the Commodore Hotel, in New York, says the New York Times, that Israel "must increase" its exports to close the gap in her balance of trade which is now $450 million.

He emphasized that the action by the European Common Market to impose a preference tariff on Israel's major cash export crop — citrus products — might be a "severe blow" to his country.

Mr. Shamir said that Israel was confronted with a three-fold economic challenge — "the three D's" — demography, defense, and development. The first was related to a mass immigration which gave Israel a population growth of five per cent a year, "one of the highest rates in the world."

He said the defense budget was also one of the highest, based on gross national product.

Israel's development in the last fifteen years, he added, "has been at an extremely rapid rate, but the pace must be kept up if the gap between export and imports is to be closed and Israel is to achieve a self-sustained economy."

Mr. Shamir said that because of the security situation in the Middle East, his nation was cut off from its natural markets and must look to Europe and the Americas where it must compete with a "highly developed and sophisticated industry."

He said that Israel had embarked on a venture of desalting water with the help of the United

Spain Realizes Its Religious Problem Is Rooted In 1492 Expulsion Of Jews And Moslems, And The Harm Done

A long-awaited and highly controversial law granting considerable religious freedom to non-Catholics in Spain is expected to be enacted next summer. The Ecumenical Council's approval on November 19 of a declaration on religious liberty opened the way for final Spanish Government action on freedom-of-worship legislation, says the New York Times. This measure was drafted more than a year ago but was pigeon-holed pending the broader decision in Rome and additional political persuasion at home.

The Council Fathers in Rome adopted a positive concept of religious liberty to replace the negative one of toleration. It affirms that no man may be prohibited from following the dictates of his conscience except by the demands of public order.

The proposed Spanish statute would grant the religious minorities wide rights. But it would adhere to the provision in the succession law that Spain must be ruled by a Catholic and it is expected to contain imprecisions as to the freedom of Protestants to proselytize.

Ultraconservative Roman Catholic sentiment in Spain, among influential laymen and those bishops who fought the Vatican declaration to the bitter end, still opposes freedoms for non-Catholics on both spiritual and political grounds.

There are key juridical problems to be solved: How to define Protestant proselytism and how far to tolerate it; and how to reconcile legally the ban on public worship by non-Catholics written into Spain's "Bill of Rights" with the new law that proposes to authorize such worship.

But the regime of Generalissimo Francisco Franco is fully committed to the granting of religious freedoms to the minorities. Thus the new law is virtually certain of promulgation in 1966.

Foreign Minister Fernando Maria Castiella y Maiz has been urging freedom of worship for eight years, since his return from the post of Ambassador to the Vatican.

Seeking international acceptance after the long isolation that followed the 1936-39 Civil War, the Franco regime has come to realize, says the New York Times, largely under Mr. Castiella's proddings, how much harm Spain has suffered from her religious restrictions.

Although there are only 30,000 Protestants and 7,000 Jews out of a population of 31,000,000, the restrictions and occasional persecution of the minorities had wide international reverberations.

In 1956, for example, the United States sternly protested when the Spanish Ministry of Information and Tourism impounded 30,000 copies of Protestant Bibles. Another ministry ordered a Protestant seminary closed.

It was after these incidents when Mr. Castiella became Foreign Minister, that the religious atmosphere in Spain started to change.

The country's religious problem has its roots in the decision in 1492 by Ferdinand and Isabella, the Catholic monarchs, to expel from Spain all Jews and Moslems who refused to become Catholic converts.

The expulsion order followed the reconquest of Granada, in January 1942. This was the final step in freeing Spain from almost eight centuries of Moorish domination. The Catholic kings believed that religious unity — Catholicism — was a pre-requisite for national unity following the victory over the Moors.

Thus, while most Moslems fled with the Moorish armies, the 400,000 Spanish Sephardic Jews were given the choice of conversion or expulsion. Of this number, old records show 240,000 were converted and 160,000 left Spain.

It was not until the 1876 Constitution, written after the brief period of the First Republic, that Spain moved both to codify her restrictions on non-Catholics and to offer them some protection.

Article XI of the Constitution thus proclaimed that while the Catholic religion would be official and protected by the state, no one would be molested for religious beliefs and "private exercise" of a cult. External "exercise," however, was banned.

This situation persisted until 1931, when the Second Republic declared full freedom of religion. But with the Nationalist victory in the Civil War, the Spanish state again formed a close relationship with the Catholic Church.

In 1945, the Fuero de los Espanales, Spain's bill of rights and fundamental law, restated the principles of the 1876 Constitution, again formally banning public worship by non-Catholics.

Under this law, still in effect, Protestants and Jews could worship at home but were prevented from organizing legally recognized congregations. They could have no religious marriages, baptisms or burials. This restrictive atmosphere culminated in the 1956 incidents.

Was Poor Boy, Made Millions, Gave Away Fortunes

Louis Katz, a poor boy on the Lower East Side of New York who became a millionaire greeting-card manufacturer and real-estate investor, died in Doctors Hospital after a one-day illness. He was 75 years old and lived at 923 Fifth Avenue.

A philanthropist who rigorously shunned publicity, Mr. Katz, according to a close friend, gave nearly five million dollars to various organizations in addition to devoting much of his time as a fund-raiser, says the New York Times. Many of his benefactions were made through the Louis and Ida Katz Foundation, which he and his late wife founded some years ago.

Mr. Katz's family was so impoverished that instead of attending high school he was forced to undertake various odd jobs. When he was 18 years old he began to sell greeting cards. After a while he established the Quality Art Novelty Company for the manufacture of greeting cards. The company flourished, and when Mr. Katz liquidated it in 1941, it was doing an international business, with a factory near Berlin and sales offices in London and Paris.

Mr. Katz then turned to real estate, acquiring land and buildings throughout the city. In later years he supervised his holdings through Realty Management, Inc., which he owned. At his death, Mr. Katz owned and managed many large apartment houses on Park and Fifth Avenues.

Mr. Katz was honorary vice president of the Jewish Chronic Disease Hospital in Brooklyn, to which he was also a generous donor. In 1949 the hospital dedicated its Shirley Joyce Katz Pavilion in memory of a daughter of the Katzes.

Other organizations in which Mr. Katz was active, either as an officer or benefactor, included the Albert Einstein College of Medicine of Yeshiva University; the Infants Home of Brooklyn; the Fight for Sight League; Boys Town of Jerusalem; the America-Israel Cultural Foundation; the Brooklyn Hebrew Home and Hospital for the Aged; and the Brownsville Boys Club in Brooklyn.

Many synagogues in the city were recipients of Mr. Katz's philanthropies. Among them were the Fifth Avenue Synagogue, of which he was a founder; Congregation Kehilath Jeshurun, Congregation Ezrath Israel, the West Side Institutional Synagogue, the Wall Street Synagogue, and the East

British Public Sees Dead Sea Scrolls First Time

The amazing story of the Dead Sea Scrolls is impressively set out in the exhibition at the British Museum, allowing the British public to see for the first time 14 of these ancient Hebrew manuscripts, ranging in date from 250 B.C. to A.D. 68, says the London Times. They are contained within the larger framework of a display comprising enlarged photographs, objects discovered during excavation, bearing on the daily life of the austere religious sect, the Essenes, the "People of the Scrolls"; and manuscripts of related interest from the collections of the British Museum.

The barren setting in the wilderness on the shores of the Dead Sea, the site of the monastic stronghold of the Essenes of the Qumran community, and the caves where successive discoveries of scrolls were made are seen in photographs. Severely plain table ware, a much rusted iron doorkey, an inkwell from the "scriptorium" in which scrolls were written, the jars of Hellenistic-Roman design in which they were stored are among relics suggestive of the Essene way of life.

Stained, darkened, crinkled, fragmentary, the pieces of the scrolls bear their neat regular lines of small script, variations in the style of which have helped to fix the various dates of production. Translations of the fragments and the corresponding Biblical texts already existing show their general agreement, although in some cases incidental differences of wording are to be noted.

In some fragments the script is hardly visible to the naked eye. Here modern technique has shown its value. Infra-red and ultra-violet photography have given almost complete decipherment. Methods of preparing the scrolls for study and of dating and interpretation are illustrated and described.

Carbon 14 tests have confirmed the accuracy of estimates of date, ascribing the scrolls to the period A.D. 33 plus or minus 200 years. Their great importance in shedding light on religious life in Palestine at the time Christianity was born is now so widely realized that one section of the display refers to some 5,000 articles and books on the scrolls, published in the 18 years since they were first discovered.

Of the scrolls not yet published one of the best preserved, the Elizabeth Hay Bechtel Psalms Scroll, shown at the museum, is shortly to appear as Volume IV of Discoveries in The Judaean Desert Of The Jordan, says the London Times. After six weeks at the British Museum the exhibition opens at the John Rylands Library, Manchester, on February 14.

Mrs. Allan Silverman was her sister's matron of honour, wearing a sleeveless, blue, peau de soie gown, with a beaded bodice; also a blue hair-bow; and carried a bouquet of white, and blue carnations. Michael Green was best man for his cousin. The ushers were: Sandor Goldstein, cousin of the bride; Allan Silverman, brother-in-law of the bride; Jerry Baranoff, William Stubina, Melvin Fergenbaum, Gerald Glantz; cousins of the groom; Leonard Goldfarb, and Victor Ackerman. White, blue, and pink roses, carnations, and pom-poms, arranged with greenery, were the wedding flowers. An orchestra played. There were two hundred guests present at the reception. Mrs. Babins, mother of the bride, wore a white, lace gown set over blue peau de soie; and had a matching hat. Mrs. Feldman, mother of the groom, was in a sleeveless, blue, peau de soie gown, appliqued with beads; and an A-line skirt; with a flowered headpiece. Each had a corsage of white orchids. Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Feldman spent their wedding trip at the Nevele Country Club, in Ellenville, N. Y., the bride going away in a pink, knitted suit; with a corsage of white orchids. They have taken up residence at 2705 Kent Avenue. Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Schwartz of Long Island, N. Y., cousins of the groom, were here for the marriage.

NAIMER-VINEBERG

The marriage of Miss Sharon Penny Vineberg, daughter of Cecil Vineberg, 634 Belmont Avenue, and Mrs. Frances Vineberg, of Montreal, to Gerald A. Naimer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hyman Naimer, 575 Glengarry Street, was solemnized at the Queen Elizabeth Hotel, on Sunday, August 29, at one o'clock, by Rabbi Wilfred Shuchat, assisted by Rabbi Maurice S. Cohen, and Cantor Nathan Mendelson. The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore an Empire gown of white, peau de soie. The bodice was re-embroidered with Alencon lace and made with a scalloped neckline; and elbow-length sleeves; and the skirt continued as a chapel train, trimmed with two rows of scalloped Alencon lace. Her lace mantilla was veiled with silk tulle illusion, and topped by a miniature, pill-box hat. She carried a bouquet of pale green camellias. Mrs. Martin Springer, sister of the groom, was matron of honour. She wore an emerald-green peau de soie gown, with an overblouse of white embroidered lace. She had a matching hat; and carried a bouquet of green gladioli blossoms. Miss Arlene Vineberg was her sister's maid of honour, wearing a jade-green, peau de soie gown, trimmed with lace at the Empire waistline; also a matching hat; and her flowers were green gladioli blossoms. Miss Heather Vineberg was her cousin's bridesmaid, in an Empire gown of green peau de soie. Her hat matched it; and she carried a bouquet of green gladioli blossoms. Gail Springer, and her sister, Jacqueline, nieces of the groom, were flower-girls. Each wore a white lace dress, with a green velvet sash; and matching headdresses; and carried bouquets of green carnations. Michael Vineberg, brother of the bride, was best man. The ushers were: Marvin Naimer, brother of the groom; Martin Springer, brother-in-law of the groom; Ike Silver, Samuel Cornfield, Stephen Roseman, and Leonard Kurland. Standards of white Fuji chrysanthemums, and pale green gladioli formed the decorations, with baskets of similar flowers hanging from the ceiling. One hundred and fifty guests were received. The tables were centered with white roses, miniature, spider chrysanthemums, and pale green grapes. Mrs. Vineberg, mother of the bride, wore a pale-green, chiffon gown; with a green headdress. Mrs. Naimer, mother of the groom, wore a mint-green, brocade gown; with a hat to match it. Their flowers were pale-green camellias carried with their purse. Mr. and Mrs. Gerald A. Naimer spent their wedding trip in Europe, the bride going away in a pink, wool suit, under a matching coat; and a corsage of white orchids. They have taken up residence at 51 Cleve Road.

"AN ENGAGEMENT IS A HAPPY OCCASION NO MATTER WHAT"

BY SARA KASDAN, AUTHOR OF "MAZEL TOV, Y'ALL", FROM WHICH THIS STORY IS AN EXCERPT, PUBLISHED IN AMERICAN JUDAISM, PUBLICATION OF THE UNION OF AMERICAN HEBREW CONGREGATIONS; REPRINTED HERE WITH KIND PERMISSION

"An engagement is a happy occasion no matter what", said my friend Bessie, when I told her I was writing a bake book for happy occasions.

"You ought to have it in your book," Bessie went on, because when Bessie starts she always goes on. "You ought to have it in your book because an engagement should be celebrated no matter what."

"What do you mean 'no matter what'?" I asked.

"What do I mean no matter what?" said Bessie, "I mean no matter what. If I meant something else I would say something else and a certain person would spread it all over town that I don't like David, that his family isn't good enough, and that I think they are both too young."

"Mazel tov, Bessie," I said. "Mazel tov! The best of luck to them. So why didn't you tell me? I'm your best friend and you don't say a word. You probably called everyone already."

"Thank you for your good wishes," said Bessie, "and don't get touchy with me because you know how I am like when people get touchy. It happened only last night. It's not yet official, and if I felt like calling anybody I would have called you first. I was going to tell you, but the minute you stepped in the door you started talking about your book, and when you start talking. . . ."

That's the way Bessie is. Every fault she has she puts off on me. I've got enough faults of my own without taking on hers. This time I let it drop. I'm not the kind of person who likes to start arguments, especially not on a happy occasion like this.

"Children, that's what they are," Bessie was saying, "just children. What do they know about life? And they want to get married yet!"

"So what will you do?"

"What can I do?" said Bessie. "I'll make an Open House to celebrate."

My friend Bessie is never right about anything, but about this she was right. An engagement should be celebrated if only for one of two reasons . . . either because you feel like celebrating or because you want people to think you feel like celebrating. And as long as you're giving a party it should be a nice one. After all, you don't want the machetenista, your daughter's new mother-in-law, to think that you don't even know how to give a party. This is your time to show her. It's a lot of trouble, but it's worth it.

The machetenista should call to offer her assistance, and then leave town. From now on, nothing she does will be right. Even leaving town is wrong, but if she's going to be wrong, it's better to be wrong at a distance.

"She left town already," said my friend Bessie, a week after she had informed me of the engagement.

"You know who," said Bessie, "Her majesty Queen Victoria. Queen Elizabeth she's not! I'm killing myself making this party and she goes away for a rest."

"Maybe she needs it."

"Who says she doesn't? From playing Mah Jongg every day you can get tired, too."

"She didn't offer to help?"

"Sure she offered," said Bessie, "sweet as sugar she offered. You'd think I didn't know how to give a party without her."

There's one thing I'll say for my friend Bessie, she knows how to give a party. Her cakes are beautiful to look at, I knew that if I came around often enough and listened to her complaints long enough, she'd give me her prize recipes. All the recipes in this book that don't have someone's name on, are Bessie's. The ones with names on she knows, too, but, I couldn't let the whole book be hers!

I got a lot of recipes from her, it's true, but don't think I didn't work for them. I had to listen to her complaints. She was still complaining the day of the party when I came over with all my silver trays and platters and bon-bon dishes.

"She called yesterday," Bessie said, "and don't say who? Because you know already who. She's back from her rest cure. She could have stayed another day. She didn't have to come back just to ask me if I needed her silver. Like I don't have silver. I thanked her very kindly and told her that I have enough silver for two parties. Then she said, 'I would like to do something. Couldn't I send a floral centerpiece for the table?' "

"That was nice," I said, "she really does want to be helpful."

"Look how dumb you are," said Bessie, "she was trying to tell me, in a nice way of course, that there should be a centerpiece for the table. As if I didn't know."

All of which may lead you to believe that a machetenista can never win, but you're wrong. Bessie's party was a great success. The machetenista herself told Bessie so. She also praised Bessie's cooking to the skies, and said how lucky her son was to get into such a fine family. It turned out, too, that she didn't play Mah-Jongg every day, only twice a week. She invited Bessie to join her Mah-Jongg club. Now they are the best of friends, which is why I say that Bessie was right when she said that engagements should be celebrated no matter what.

CLASS IN COOKERY

seven cups flour
pinch salt
six teaspoons baking powder
one cup oil
two tablespoons white vinegar
two cups sugar four eggs
one pound shortening
one cup orange juice
one-half pound poppy seeds (optional)

Mix all ingredients thoroughly by hand. Drop teaspoonful of mixture on cookie sheet about two inches apart. Before placing in oven sprinkle with sugar. Bake at three hundred and fifty degrees until brown. Makes about eight dozen cookies.

Mrs. Charles Kleiman,
50 Hallsport Crescent, Toronto.

PEANUT DROPS

one six-ounce package semi-sweet chocolate bits one egg
one teaspoon vanilla
one-quarter cup peanut butter three-quarters cup sifted confectioners' sugar one teaspoon milk
one cup salted peanuts

Melt chocolate and peanut butter over low heat. Add sugar, egg, vanilla, and milk. Beat well to blend. Stir in peanuts. Drop by teaspoonful on wax paper. Cool until firm.

JEWS ARE TREATED BETTER IN ZAMBIA, AFRICA, THAN IN MANY OTHER COUNTRIES

Jews are treated better in Zambia, an African country that took the step from colony to independent nation only about one year ago, than in many highly developed countries, according to a leading American educator who recently returned from a visit. Dr. Morton I. Teicher, dean of Yeshiva University's Wurzweiler School of Social Work, added a qualification, however. He said Zambia's Jews fear that intermarriage could threaten their survival.

This fear, he said, stems from the smallness of the Jewish population in Zambia. Totaling only about 100 families in a country of 3.5 million people, Jews have little opportunity to mingle with other Jews. With the exception of the fear of intermarriage, however, Jews in Zambia are relatively free of problems prevalent in other countries. Their professional skills are respected rather than resented and they are accorded absolute religious, cultural and political freedom.

"For a country that was a colony only about one year ago," Dr. Teicher said, "Zambia has shown remarkable maturity." His visit to Zambia was his second in three years. He had spent a year and a half in the capital city of Lusaka in 1962 and 1963, when Zambia was the British colony of Northern Rhodesia. During that visit, he helped to establish the Oppenheimer College of Social Service, the nation's first institution of higher learning and first integrated school of any kind.

In June, Dr. Teicher returned to find Zambia developing its first University, the University of Zambia, which will open its doors to students next Spring. He said he expects Oppenheimer College to become an integral part of the University, as its undergraduate school of social work. He said Zambia's transition from colony to independent nation has gone beautifully. He gave much of the credit to Zambia's President, Kenneth Kuanda, for what he called an atmosphere with remarkably little tension or vindictiveness.

Describing the President as "a real statesman," Dr. Teicher noted he has established a relatively stable government with a policy under which Zambia spends more money on education than on any other item in the national budget. Dr. Kuanda realizes Zambia's greatest need is development of skilled leaders and professional people, and he's putting his beliefs into practice.

Dr. Teicher, who joined Yeshiva University in New York in 1956, has been dean of the Wurzweiler School of Social Work since 1959. The School has received accreditation from the Council on Social Work Education, and this accreditation was confirmed with a commendation in 1962. Earlier, he had been with the University of Toronto where he served on the medical and social work faculties of the University and as chief psychiatric social worker at the Toronto Psychiatric Hospital for eight years.

Born in New York City on March 10, 1920, Dr. Teicher received the Bachelor of Social Science degree from the City College of New York in 1940; the Master of Social Work degree at the University of Pennsylvania School of Social Work in 1942; and the Doctor of Philosophy degree at the University of Toronto in 1956. During World War II he served with the Army in the China-Burma-India theater as a military psychiatric social worker and clinical psychologist. Before going to Toronto in 1948, he was chief social worker in the New England area for the U.S. Veterans Administration.

An anthropologist as well as a social worker, he has done field work among the Eskimos in the Canadian Arctic and the Iroquois in Ontario. Dr. Teicher is a member of the National Association of Social Workers, American Anthropological Association, the Society for Applied Anthropology, and has written for scholarly journals in the fields of psychology, psychiatry, social work, and anthropology. His publications include papers on Eskimo psychosis, Eskimo adoption, and the relationship between social science and social work.

Dr. Teicher has served as Democratic district leader of the 21st district, 3rd Ward, in New Rochelle, N.Y.; as chairman of the Democratic Party Research Advisory Council in Westchester County; and member of the Public Affairs Committee of the New York State Democratic Committee.

WORLD LEADER OF REFORM JUDAISM PREDICTS IT WILL SOON BE RECOGNIZED IN ISRAEL

Reform Judaism, the most liberal branch of the faith, will soon be officially recognized in Israel, the world leader of Reform Jews predicted in Toronto. Rabbi Jacob J. Shankman, president of the World Union for Progressive Judaism and the titular head of about 1,000,000 Reform Jews throughout the world; addressed the members of Holy Blossom Temple on the recent advances of liberal Judaism in Israel.

In an interview with the Globe and Mail, he said that Liberal Judaism in Israel has met opposition from Orthodox Judaism since the state was founded in 1948.

One reason, he explained, is that Israel has always been ruled by coalition governments, and one of the parties involved in the coalition has been the religious Orthodox party. The recent election might change this tradition, he said.

Rabbi Shankman said four Reform rabbis are working in Israel. All were trained in the United States. A Reform secondary school has been built to provide a liberal religious education.

Asked about opposition to Reform Judaism, Rabbi Shankman said: "Orthodox rabbis anywhere resist change." He said that although he might be individually recognized in Israel as a North American religious leader, he would not officially be recognized as a rabbi, nor would his ordination be recognized.

Rabbi Shankman said Reform Jews in Israel are not harassed in their worship, but at times Orthodox rabbis have tried to influence municipal zoning bylaws to work against Reform Judaism.

He predicted, however, that Reform Judaism would eventually overcome these obstacles because it is a liberal force.

Rabbi Shankman was in Toronto to promote Rabbi W. Gunther Plaut's second volume of history of Reform Judaism, "The Growth Of Reform Judaism." Dr. Plaut is rabbi of Holy Blossom Temple.

In answer to a question, Rabbi Plaut said that Reform Judaism will increase its efforts to become better known to non-Jews as well as Jews. "There will be an increased attempt to make Reform Judaism known to the unchurched and the unaffiliated."

He predicted that a Jewish information centre would be established in Toronto. "I rather think that many people would inquire," he said. He emphasized, however, that Reform Judaism is not a missionary religion in the Christian sense.

Britain Makes Menuhin Honorary Knignt, K.B.E.

Yehudi Menuhin, the New York boy who survived the ordeal of child prodigy to become one of the world's ranking violinists, has become an honorary Knight Commander of the Order of the British Empire, writes Anthony Lewis in the New York Times. The unusual honor was awarded, formally, by Queen Elizabeth, but on the recommendation of Prime Minister Harold Wilson.

The holder of a K.B.E., as it is known, takes the title "Sir" if he is British or a citizen of the Commonwealth. But this is not the case with honorary awards to an American like Mr. Menuhin.

Other Americans have been given K.B.E.'s in past years. Arthur L. Goodhart, an authority on English law and former master of University College, Oxford, has one. Another was given to Edward R. Murrow shortly before his death.

Ordinarily, a high British honor of this kind is given to foreigners because of their special services and ties to Britain.

Mr. Menuhin, now forty-nine years old, has his home in Hampstead, and lives there when he is not touring or in his summer house on the Greek island of Mykonos. He also has close ties with the musical life of Britain.

He founded the Bath Festival of Music and is still its musical director. His services to the Edinburgh International Festival led earlier this year to his being given the Freedom of Edinburgh.

In 1964 he founded a music school for thirty-two talented children in Stoke D'Abernon. The British Broadcasting Corporation carried a television series showing Mr. Menuhin teaching the young pupils.

As a K.B.E., Mr. Menuhin will be entitled if he wishes to use those initials after his name. He will receive the badge and star of the order in due course.

THE JOEL BRAND STORY

The following appeared as a letter to the London Times:

In their television play, The Joel Brand Story, the B.B.C. depict my father as interviewing Brand with a cynical detachment, which is quite out of keeping with his character, and saying almost casually that there would be nowhere to send the million victims proposed to be exchanged for lorries to be used in the Nazi war effort.

It is my recollection that, as reported in the press at the time of the Eichmann trial, Brand claimed in his evidence to have met an unknown British official at a dinner party who, talking of the million hostages, said, "Where should we send them?" and on inquiry was told afterwards that the official was Moyne.

The B.B.C. however has chosen to show my father sitting drinking in the bar of a club. Such was not his habit, as I have verified with his A.D.C. at the time, who knows of no interview with Brand having taken place in a club or elsewhere.

The B.B.C. shows Brand being led up to my father, and, after a formal presentation, being received with scant courtesy and cold disdain. Those who remember my father will know that his first reaction at such an interview would have been concern for the unhappy man in front of him.

While it is inconceivable that in the circumstances the Jewish Agency would have insisted on the million hostages being brought to Palestine, the question of their destination may indeed have been mentioned by somebody to Brand, whose bona fides I do not dispute. Like my father, he is dead.

It is of particular interest to note that Alec Weissberg, in his book Advocate Of the Dead, on which the B.B.C. claim to have based their play, writes on page 167 of the English translation, that Brand said: "Afterwards I heard that the man, with whom I spoke was not in fact Lord Moyne but another British statesman. Unfortunately I have no means of verifying this."

The B.B.C.'s claim in the Radio Times to give a verbatim account of the alleged conversation passes the bounds of credibility. Such was not my father's way of talking; such were not his manners; such was never his attitude to one man or to a million Jewish sufferers.

Yours faithfully,

MOYNE.

Biddesden House, Andover, Hampshire, Dec. 15.

LEWIS, N. D. P. DEPUTY LEADER, WARNS JEWS ON OVERLY-EMOTIONAL VIEW OF FASCIST DANGERS

David Lewis, deputy leader of the New Democratic Party took issue with those who claim that strong legislation against hate literature would constitute an invasion of the freedom of political expression, says the Montreal Star. Speaking to the annual meeting of the Association of Survivors of Nazi Oppression, in the Adath Jeshurun Synagogue, in Montreal, Mr. Lewis said that he respects people who disagree with him on this score and he feels that many of them are sincere, but added:

"I do not hold it to be a democratic virtue to make it easy for the enemies of democracy to destroy democracy."

The truth is, he said, that people who conduct hate campaigns or disseminate hate literature do not use their democratic right, they abuse it.

Mr. Lewis said that legislation ought to be introduced immediately to make it illegal to print and disseminate hate literature or to conduct a campaign of contempt against people merely because they belong to a particular race or religious group.

"There is no reason for further delay. We must have a law against such activities and it must be a law with real teeth in it."

But Mr. Lewis made it plain that he was not interested merely in punitive actions against the hatemongers. He said that the value of legislation would be educational as well as punitive because it would create an atmosphere in which it would be easier for understanding among different groups to flourish.

Mr. Lewis, himself a Jew, warned his predominantly Jewish audience not to become "hysterical or self-righteous" about the dangers of Fascist propaganda.

He said that the Jews have a peculiar role to play in the fight against the forces of intolerance and oppression because of a long history of discrimination and suffering but added that this fight should be seen in the perspective of the universal human struggle for justice.

The fight against oppression, he said, can only be conducted properly if the co-operation of many millions of non-Jews can be mobilized in a mature and responsible way. Irrationality and an overly-emotional attitude on the part of the Jews will in the end become merely self-defeating, he said.

Mr. Lewis said he is not impressed by arguments that latter-day Nazi leaders should be dismissed as "nuts" or "punks" and that they do not really count on the political scene. Hitler, himself, he pointed out, started off as a "nut" and ended up by throwing the entire world into war.

At the meeting it was decided that the association, formerly known as the Association of Former Concentration Camp Inmates and Survivors of Nazi Oppression will reverse its name and will be known mainly by the latter part of it, in order to broaden its base of membership and to facilitate co-operation with other similar groups.

It was also announced that Paul Goldstein will become full-time executive vice-president of the Association in order to devote all his energies to extending the operations of the Association throughout Canada. At present it has 5,000 members most of them living in Montreal.

Mr. Goldstein has been working on an investigation of the activities of Fascist groups in Canada. In the process he has spoken to many leaders of extreme right wing groups, including Adrien Arcand, of the National Unity Party. Mr. Goldstein said the influence of such groups is far greater than is generally believed.

Russian Give Private Recital To Their N. Y. Dentists

Two renowned Soviet musical artists expressed their gratitude to two New York dentists by giving a private recital in a split-level suburban home in Demarest, New Jersey. Matislav Rostroporich, a 'cellist regarded by some as an equal of Casals, and his wife, the soprano Galina Vishnevskaya, performed before an audience of about 60 guests at the Bergen County home of Dr. Jerry Linn, says the New York Times, who, with Dr. Martin Feldman, had done what they describe as "basic mouth rehabilitation" for the visiting artists.

"Tremendous," and "magnificent" and "thrilling" were among the milder phrases uttered in hushed tones after the artists had performed. And each part of the performance was received with a standing ovation in the living room crowded with rows of folding chairs.

Mr. Rostropovich played a Bach suite, and Miss Vishnevskaya sang from Tchaikovsky and the aria "One Fine Day" from Puccini's "Madame Butterfly."

They performed for about 45 minutes. The guests, most of whom are patients of the dental partnership at 57 West 57th Street, expressed gratitude for the artists' visit to the United States.

"If this doesn't cure the cold war," remarked one guest, "nothing will."

The Soviet artists have been in the United States since October, with the Moscow Philharmonic Orchestra. They met their music-loving dentist friends through Simon Simonov, an assistant to Sol Hurok, the impresario for the visit.

Dr. Linn said that he and his partner had also treated such persons as Jackie Vernon and Jack E. Leonard, the television comedians.

Acting as translator for the Russian couple — Mr. Rostropovich speaks a little English, his wife practically none — was Dr. Jerome Gross, a surgeon from Cleveland.

Dr. Gross, it was said, speaks seven languages. He spoke Russian fluently enough to carry on chatty conversations with the Soviet artists, says the New York Times. The Soviet performers have returned home. "We are invited to spend next summer with them in Moscow," Dr. Linn confided.

freight and passenger charges on the Government-owned railroads, and higher taxes on champagne and spirits, was given a first reading in the Bundestag in November.

The Bundestag's Budget Committee is expected to take up the compensation appropriation in a few days. Mr. Grossman said that he would not be allowed to testify before the committee but that he and Dr. Nahum Goldmann, of New York, president of the Conference on Material Claims Against Germany, were appealing to Deputies familiar with the issue, reports the New York Times. Mr. Grossman said those particularly affected by the proposed reduction in appropriations were "aged and needy widows whose husbands died before October, 1953, old and indigent members of the post-1953 group who at last have been assured of some hardship payments".

Rabbi Mordecai Waxman, of Temple Israel, Great Neck, N. Y., was elected chairman of the American Histadrut Cultural Exchange Institute. An extensive program was adopted for an exchange of lecturers and for joint seminars between American unions and educational institutions of the Histadrut, Israel's Labor Federation.

Dr. Albert B. Sabin, discoverer of the polio vaccine, and Dr. Joseph Kaplan, president of the International Union of Geodesy and Geophysics, were elected honorary chairmen of the group, says the New York Times. Dr. Judd L. Teller, of New York, was reelected executive vice chairman; and Fred J. Isaacson, New York, was named treasurer.

WAS POOR BOY

Midwood Jewish Center in Brooklyn, which he also helped to found.

Mr. Katz was a member of the Masons, the Grand Street Boys Association and the Fresh Meadow Country Club, Great Neck, L. I., says the New York Times. Surviving are a son, Stephen G.; two daughters, Mrs. Barbara S. Katz, and Mrs. Ruth D. Haberman; a brother, David; two sisters, Mrs. Anna Dworkin, and Mrs. Sarah Grad; and six grandchildren.

What is the A. B. C. or Audit Bureau of Circulations, and what is its importance?

A. The A. B. C. is a voluntary association of major publishers, advertisers, national and local; and advertising agencies, working together to police circulation claims, and to translate them into facts.

Q. Why are circulation facts so important?

A. Circulation figures are the only honest basis on which print advertising is sold and purchased. Publishers base their prices for advertising on the amount of their circulation, and its quality. An advertiser buys circulation. A. B. C. circulation facts tell him the exact amount at any time.

Q. How does an advertiser know that this is really so?

A. A. B. C. publishers keep exact records of all circulation receipts for subscriptions and single copy sales. These can tell him, too, whether the circulation is sold without a premium, or with one, to induce payment; or whether the circulation is composed of membership in an organization; or whether it is sold on its merit alone. Was the subscription sold on a special rate? Was it paid by mail directly to the publisher, or to an agent? These are just some of the categories of subscription payments which are recorded.

Q. Why are some of these answers so important?

A. Sometimes these answers can tell an advertiser whether the subscriber needs to be coaxed into continuing, or starting. Are subscribers voluntarily buying the publication? Do they need a cut-rate or an added attraction to keep on?

Q. How are the figures checked?

A. The publisher checks his figures, and reports them twice a year to the head office of the A. B. C. These are audited once a year by travelling A. B. C. auditors, who check the names, the receipts, the printing invoices, the bank deposits, the paper used, the ink used, the postage receipts — all of these show the number of copies printed or mailed; and paid for. If an A. B. C. field auditor goes to work for a publication whose books he has audited within a year or so, there is an automatic re-audit by another auditor. An auditor does not audit the figures of any publication for more than two consecutive years.

Q. Does the A. B. C. allow past-due subscriptions?

A. The A. B. C. rules state that all subscriptions up for renewal must be paid within three months of the expiry date. The publisher must keep track of each one. These are considered paid, but not completely so, until paid in full, for the term to come.

Q. Are new subscriptions considered as paid?

A. Not until payment is received for the term in advance.

Q. What does this cost the publisher?

A. The publisher considers the membership at his investment to protect the investment of each advertiser. The publisher pays quarterly dues; the cost of the auditing done in his office, by the hour; and the cost of checking done further, at the A. B. C. head office. If further checking is needed, the publisher pays that cost, too. An auditor spends several days in the Canadian Jewish Review office each year.

Q. Are these the only costs?

A. The greatest cost to the publisher is to see that the records are kept in order and up to date. The Canadian Jewish Review addressograph plates are posted to show the date and method and amount of payment; and the date of the subscription, and the length of its term. A publication must carry on the address label all information that the auditor would need to guide him in checking. A publication which sells subscriptions on short-term, or with a premium, or in combination with other publications, for instance, will carry all that information and more, on the address label, coded in some way.

Q. What do A. B. C. reports and statements say about the Canadian Jewish Review?

A. They tell at a quick glance the provincial breakdown; the amount sold in a period; that the Canadian Jewish Review never sells a subscription on a premium; never with a cut rate; never jointly with another publication; never as part of membership in an organization.

The Canadian Jewish Review is sold on its own merits, and always has been.
It has no affiliation with any organization.

A. B. C. reports and statements supply facts to advertisers.
These facts need to be known for advertising money to be spent wisely and honestly.

A. B. C. publications can never guarantee results. They do guarantee readership.

The Canadian Jewish Review is in its 22nd year of supplying facts to advertisers, investing to protect investments.

The Canadian Jewish Review is still the only publication reaching the general Jewish community in Canada, which can provide audited, paid, A. B. C. circulation facts and figures for the protection of each advertiser.
